

One thing that we can be sure of...Cohocton Wind Watch may be against wind power, but they are definitely in favor of recycling.

That's right, they keep recycling the same old wacky claims and stories that they did months ago that have already been discredited and proven wrong.

Maybe they just accidentally sent some old letters that they had sitting around from last winter (trying to save some paper?), but the latest letters in the Valley News from the Wind Watchers have gone back to the same conspiracy theories that they were trying to get people to believe long ago.

Conspiracies in science, conspiracies in government, and conspiracies under every rock. Have we really gotten back to stories about cows with nose bleeds and windmills being used as landing lights for UFOs?

Recycling your trash is commendable, but the stories being recycled by Cohocton Wind Watch would be more useful if they were thrown on the compost heap.

Jeff Carroll

Published in The Valley News March 13, 2007